The landscape of the area impresses the spectator with the selfsame intensity of old, as befits a habitat unaltered by the human hand. With its varying relief of spectacular mountain summits, hillocks, ravines and gorges, this massif harbours wet forest plant species such as yew, beech, holly and black pines. The northern slopes are cloaked in rich, verdant forests where boxwood, ferns and junipers grow. The botanical wealth of the Tinença de Benifassà is completed by an abundance of plants that are entirely unique to the area.
